

WORLD FLIERS OVER WORST OF PERILOUS TRIP

Aviators Complete Hop Across Pacific, Landing In Japan.

London, May 17.—Completing the 878 mile hop across the Pacific from Attu Island to Paramashiru in the Kuriles Islands, the three American round the world planes were resting up for the next jump to the main island of the Japanese group, according to dispatches received here today.

The landing was in Kashiwabara bay in Paramashiru Island shortly before noon today (Japanese time.) The next hop southward to the main Japanese island is about the same distance, nearly 900 miles.

It was the first time planes had traversed that section of the Pacific. The flight was over open sea, piloted by a single small vessel, the Elder of the United States Fish Commission.

A Japanese and American destroyer were in Kashiwabara bay to greet the fliers and furnish them with supplies for the next hop.

The American fliers in the parlance of the sea, are now "over the hump" on their round the world flight. Taking the most difficult part of their flight first at a time when the conditions were very unfavorable they have now completed what is considered the most dangerous part of the journey. The next lap will be over the group of islands north of the main Japanese island. The next lap will be over the mainland of Asia and Europe.

The European fliers who have outstripped the Americans in point of distance hold an advantage more apparent than real. In flying conditions they have had all the best of it, with none of the weather difficulties and water hazards that have held up the Americans.

Tokio, May 17.—The three Americans round the world fliers are today celebrating the successful lap across the Pacific, from Attu to the Japanese Kuriles. They expected to arrive here within the next few days.

Extensive preparations have been made for their reception. The planes left Chicago, Island of Attu, early Friday and laid a course for Cape Kronatki. From there they followed the tiny rock course which marks the almost undersea line of the peninsula which reaches nearly to the Asiatic side.

The American destroyer Pope and Ford were waiting their arrival at Paramashiru Island because of the heavy storms which have been sweeping the Kuriles extra precautions will be taken in the mooring of the big American planes.

In completing the 878 mile leap across the Pacific a new aviation course was charted, as it was the first time such a flight has been made.

PROBE ACCIDENT IN AKRON PARK; WOMAN IS KILLED

Akron, O., May 17.—The Summit County coroner and county officials today are busily engaged in an investigation of the accident at Summit Beach Park late last night, which caused the death of Mrs. Bessie Pollock, 33, and the perhaps fatal injury of G. C. Thompson, 24.

She was decapitated. There is no explanation of the accident. The park management claims the coaster has been inspected twice since the opening May 10.

Mrs. Pollock has been estranged from her husband, Steven V. Pollock, a locomotive engineer who was at Delphos when notified last night of the accident. She leaves two daughters 14 and 12 years old.

Grimes was closely questioned about a contemplated prosecution of David Gershon, former department of justice agent in San Diego, Cal.

"The President is indisposed with a cold and it is deemed advisable that he remain in his room and keep quiet until he can return to his duties without liability."

Dr. Sawyer refused to state whether the President had any temperature and he also would not say how soon he expected Mr. Coolidge to return to his desk.

BRAND ON ROAD QUESTION IN OHIO

The Republican state platform this year should declare that Ohio main roads, known as the state highway system, should be provided for out of state funds and the lesser roads in the counties should be provided for by the counties, according to Charles Brand, Urbana, congressman from the seventh Ohio district.

Congressman Brand declares that road assessment, now a difficult problem, is one easily adjustable by new laws, the present laws being written in 1904 before the era of automobiles and trucks. He points out that under the present system, the cost of a communicating highway between two cities in Ohio would be paid for principally by the intervening counties rather than counties that form the terminals and derive the most benefit.

The congressman thus alleges that the cost of a highway between Columbus and Cincinnati would work the most expense on Madison, Clark, Fayette, Greene Clinton or Warren Counties and that two-thirds of that expense would be unjustly on the rural people.

Congressman Brand's solution is for the 10,000 miles of roads now called the state system be built and maintained out of the general funds of the state plus federal aid and that the 70,000 miles of lesser roads in the state should be paid for by the counties so that all roads will be paid for by the public rather than by individuals or classes. The state system, he says, amounts to more than 100 miles in each county.

Brand intends to see the convention has an opportunity to declare itself on this proposed program. Road-building on a cash basis, he says, instead of bonding, will decrease total costs amazingly and general participation will secure roads where most needed quickly.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD SHOULD NOT BE JUNKED IN FAVOR OF PROPOSED PLAN SAYS HOOPER

Chairman of Organization Declares Substitute Is "Impractical, Cumbersome and Expensive"— Gives Reasons for Opinion.

Editor's Note: Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the U. S. Railroad Labor Board, believes the present board should not be junked in favor of the substitute proposed in the Howell-Barkley bill now pending before Congress—a substitute which he terms "impractical, cumbersome and expensive." His reasons for believing the existing board can better serve the carriers, employees and public are set forth in the following article.

By BEN W. HOOPER,
Chairman U. S. Railway Labor Board

Chicago, May 17.—In 1916, upon the eve of a presidential election, congress, under the threat of a railroad strike, enacted the Adamson law. Whatever may be said of the merits of that measure, the methods to procure its enactment were subversive of orderly constitutional procedure.

Congress now under the pressure of an organized minority, is being asked to enact another law affecting railroad controversies, which is destructive of the rights of 98 per cent of the people and really detrimental to the ultimate best interests of the two per cent whose leaders have framed this bill.

The Howell-Barkley bill is of incomparably greater importance, and more far reaching effect than a hundred Adamson laws. The latter law related to one question, namely the working hours of a limited portion of railway employees, while the Howell-Barkley bill affects every existing rule of pay and every working rule of every railway employee in the United States.

Here is a closeup of the Howell-Barkley bill from the public standpoint:

It wipes out a board composed of equal representation of carriers, employees and the public, which has jurisdiction over all labor controversies.

It has established no board or tribunal with jurisdiction of the big fundamental question of wages and working conditions, the questions which usually provoke strikes.

It sets up a board of mediation and conciliation, composed of five members, without any power to pass upon disputes out with only the power to mediate and conciliate, that is, the power to beg both parties to be good.

It attempts the undemocratic and un-American thing of confining representation on the adjustment boards to certain labor organizations and excludes other rival organizations. The whole machinery of the bill is cumbersome, complicated and expensive.

The Howell-Barkley bill is, in effect, a Socialistic governmental wage fixing scheme upon a vast scale. It would make whatever wages and working rules might exist at the date of its passage an irreducible minimum.

The carrier that attempted to reduce wages would be subject to severe penalties and would have no tribunal to go before in search of relief.

On the other hand, employees would still have the unfettered liberty to strike for higher wages.

It seems to me the American public which pays three billion dollars annually in freight and passenger rates, part of which is paid out in railway wages, would expect of its congressmen the retention of the right of the public representation in the adjustment of labor controversies.

M. E. CONFERENCE WOULD REGULATE WORK OF CHILD

Resolutions Calling For Federal Legislation Submitted.

Springfield, Mass., May 17.—Resolutions calling for federal legislation for regulation of child labor was submitted to the Methodist general conference today by the committee on state of the church.

Rev. Dr. John L. Hillman, of Des Moines, Ia., as chairman of the committee on education has submitted a report calling for more general support of the Methodist theological schools by the church. The appeal for support came from several of the seminaries and the resolution calls for preference for schools where the professors are nominated by the bishops. Candidates for the ministry will be required by this resolution to attend approved schools.

Difficulties encountered by many of the small churches in negotiating loans under the requirements of the church for the execution of trust bonds and mortgages for all such transactions in amounts exceeding $300, have prompted the committee on missions and church extension to favor an increase in amount to $500.

This will enable the church to secure loans in amounts under $500 by issuing notes.

BOBBED HAIR FAD HAS DEPRIVED MERE MAN OF RETREAT AS WOMEN INVADE BARBER SHOP

What has become of the old-fashioned, free and easy, smoke-infested barbershop of the past? They will answer you that it is still there, but like the voting places and the smoking room, has been purged of its purely masculine flavor by the encroachments of the modern woman. And thereby, man's most popular forum, the place where discussions were discussed, national problems settled and men hid away to gossip has passed on.

When Mr. Volstead's well known act eliminated the saloon with its popular debating club and open forum, the barber shop assumed greater responsibilities than ever. It was the place where men foregathered ostensibly to get a shave or hair-cut, but in reality to get into an argument.

In the old days it was a safe bet that a visitor given to argument could start one on any question he desired in any barber shop on a moment's notice. Barbers themselves were always ready to argue on either side of the question no matter how important or how lacking in importance. They would dispute in loud and angry tones the question of whether it would rain or not rain any certain day and carry the argument through most of the day. Of course those were occasions when the subjects for argument were nearly exhausted, a rare condition indeed.

In those days a casual inquiry as to whether a certain party had been in the shop that afternoon, was sufficient to set off bombastic oratory and pointed repartee as to when the inquiry was last seen and why.

But those days are past, for the era of the bobbed head has converted the barber shop into a family affair instead of a men's club. Women, who formerly entered there timidly to the sound of much sh-sh-shing on the part of the hairdressers, now drop in and out with a familiarity born of long practice. They meet women friends there and the argumentative barbers are solemnly silent while they discuss the latest fashions.

It is another prominent mark among the changes that have identified America after the war. Restless men, driven from their saloons by prohibition, forced to maintain an attitude of polite tolerance in the voting polls by suffrage, are now finding another of their favorite haunts usurped by the advent of bobbing as a universal fashion.

The woman who used to stand out in front of the barber shop and make vain motions to attract the attention of her husband within, now goes in without compunction and addresses him on an equal footing. It is not uncommon to see a family invade the barbershop for tonsorial attention. Husband and wife get haircuts in adjacent chairs, while son and daughter await a like shorning of the locks.

And a hush has fallen over the barbershop, similar to the periodical hushes that used to ensue when the place was suddenly quieted by the advent of a female. In those days, hilarity broke out anew when she left. Now the hush is perpetual for there is nearly always a woman in the shop.

And Congress, arguing itself hoarse over national problems in Washington may expect no relief from the forum debates that brought a thrill to the habitues of the barbershop in the past.

Market News

New York, May 17—Stagnant conditions prevailed in the short session on the stock exchange today. Covering operations by timid shorts as a result of the president's veto of the bonus bill appeared to have been completed in yesterday's closing hour, there being an absence of buying from this source, save for a brief spurt at the opening.

Lack of initiative was shown throughout the morning due to tendency of operators to hold aloof pending enactment of certain legislation in Washington.

HOW TO ADD "MUFFLER" TO YOUR RECEIVER

Stage of Radio Frequency Can Be Added to Any Receiving Set

By CARLTON E. BUTLER

Radio Engineer

The old saying is to be "Radio frequency for distance, audio for volume." The increasing interference of radiated energy from regenerative receiving sets should change this saying somewhat.

"Add a stage of radio to lessen howling," would be more appropriate. Just what type of receivers cause the most trouble by radiating energy is under considerable discussion. The single circuit receiver is probably the worst offender but as the two ion made to operate without causing the tubes to oscillate, a potentiometer to place a bias on the grids of the tubes is the usual method. In the Neutrodyne the capacity of the tubes is balanced out by small condensers.

If a receiver that is using radio frequency is operated with the tubes in an oscillating condition it will cause interference with surrounding receivers. This is true to a limited extent only. All receivers using radio frequency must have some provision made to operate without causing the tubes to oscillate.

An' now that movin' day has passed, we're in our new location, but we ain't changed our minds a bit about that grand occasion. We hadn't more than settled in the house up on the hill, till it wuz sold, for otherwise we might be up there still. I've heard it said variety's what puts the spice in life, but that don't take in movin' day, accordin' to my wife. If practice makes us perfect, as in any art, at this here movin' business I kin play the leadin' part I could explain the details of the system used this Spring, but why prolong the agony, an' all that sort of thing. Let it suffice, we've got a house, an' also, what is more, we're goin' to have a garden right outside our kitchen door, where radishes an' onions an' such healthful fruits will thrive an' mem'ries of those early days at gard'ning I'll revive. But movin' wuz the subject fer discussion here tonight, three times in six or seven months is plenty. Am I right? At every place, so far, I've had a dickens of a time in puttin' my antenna up with poles or trees to climb. But at the new house, as a trial, I put it in the attic, to cut out all them circus stunts an' features acrobatic. An' now as shades of evenin' fall, I drop my spade an' hoe. An' slippin' on the earmuffs, get the scores for Radio. We may have had to move a lot, but when all's said an' done, there ain't no use in crabbin'. Life can't be all play an' fun. We ought to be real thankful that we've got a place to live an' thankful for the veg'tables my garden's gonna give. But most of all I'm thankful, an' I'll make this real emphatic, that my old set is workin' with an aerial in the attic—Copyright, 1924, Washington Electric and Manufacturing Company.

MODISH MITZI—Harry Arouses More Suspicion By Reviewin g Diamond Rings.

Mitzi isn't in this scene at all. She heard about it from Pretty Polly—who watched Handsome Harry and reported her suspicions. Harry, the gay, the well dressed, the style loving Harry was seen to pass by his tailor's windows without one glance at the handsomest double breasted suit ever made!

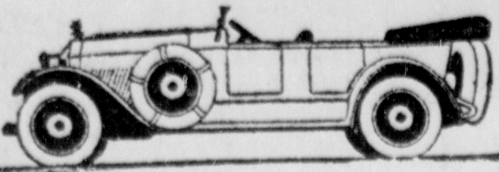

And that is not all. Harry made things look still more odd by continuing on his way! The polo shirt, the last word for the golfer, displayed in the window did not interest him. Nor did the mogador tie. Nor the formal shirt with the moire tie. Nor the printed silk handkerchief—

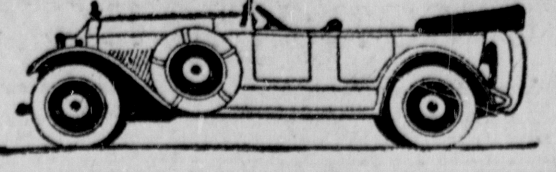

Not a glance window-ward. Not one. He does not seem to know what he is missing. He simply could not know that he is passing by a wool golf cap in stunning colors. He could not know about the derby. For Harry is always looking for or at fashions. Now he is looking at his money—actually!

The only things he sees are the diamond rings and bracelets. Polly might just as well be miles away. Harry is a changed man. Perhaps there is something to that rumor about Harry and Adelaide. It certainly looks as though this would settle it. One can only wait and see. Mitzi will tell you about it soon.

Interest to Motorists

OLDS IS OFFERING A DELUXE MODEL FULLY EQUIPPED

Trends in the automobile business furnish ample proof that the luxuries of yesterday are the necessities of today. More and more the public is demanding cars containing every accessory that has proven its worth. In response to this demand the Olds Motor Works, Lansing, Michigan, is offering the Deluxe Sedan, the sport model of the closed car field.

The Deluxe Sedan is painted in a beautiful shade of maroon and is equipped with Tuxedo wheels, enameled in black with gold stripes, nickel-plated radiator shell, bar, radiator cap, motor, hood painted in maroon to match the body, spotlight, four running board step plates, windshield, cleaner, rear vision mirror, front bumper, rear sport bumpers, sport tire carrier, four trunk rails on the back of the car, trunk platform and black enameled steel trunk.

The list price of the Deluxe Sedan is $1,245, which is $110 more than the standard sedan.

STAR IS EQUIPPED WITH NEW FEATURES; 4 WHEEL BRAKES

Balloon tires, disc wheels and four wheel brakes are some of the outstanding features of the new Star Car this season.

Tire manufacturers are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars educating people to appreciate the value of this new tire. They are pointing out the advantages and comforts derived from their use and the Star Car is the first car in America at the price to offer this important feature as standard equipment.

It is almost a year now since the four wheel brakes movement got under way and for those who desire they are standard now with the Star. Interest to Motorists

WAYSIDE PARKING MENACE MAY BE LEGISLATED OUT

The traffic menace of wayside parking will be called to the State Highway Department's attention by The Ohio State Automobile Association, representing 83 automobile clubs with more than 100,000 members throughout the state.

This announcement, made yesterday by Secretary Chas. C. Jones, was occasioned, he said, by the opening of the season when motorists swarm over the main highways surrounding the cities and are the often the victims of serious traffic congestion, caused by parking in front of wayside stands.

It has been reported to the state association that some stands have been found encroaching on the roadway itself. In the majority of cases, however, the stands are merely built flush with the roadside. Their location, however, makes it necessary for motorists who stop to make purchases to block at least one side of the road, and often vehicles stop on both sides, leaving only a single lane open for traffic to pass through.

"As the summer advances," Jones declared, "this situation will become worse, for in addition to refreshments and knickknacks, these wayside stands will be selling garden product, fruit and other farm products."

"Thousands of motorists throughout the state like to do part of their marketing in this manner and these wayside stands in themselves may not be at all objectionable. The state association's objection is based only on the fact that they are too often so located that they constitute a traffic menace and a serious cause of congestion."

"Every summer serious accidents occur in almost every county of the state because of congestion at wayside stands. On some of the main roads traffic has been slowed down for more than a mile at either side of stands that have succeeded in working up a very prosperous business."

A similar situation, Jones said, was caused by motorists stopping on the road to take a rest or repair a tire, or make motor adjustments.

It was pointed out that this situation had led the state association to plan the proposal of a law in the next session of the legislature, the purpose of which would be to prohibit vehicles from stopping on the paved portion of any highway, except in cases of absolute emergency, or unavoidable necessity. Such a law has been in operation in Pennsylvania for several years and has been found to be of great assistance in keeping traffic moving and in preventing accidents. At a recent conference of Jones and Fred H. Caley, President of the O. S. A. A. with Governor A. V. Donahey, the governor declared himself in favor of such a law in the interest of facilitating motor travel and promoting safety.

In the meantime, Jones announced the State Highway Department will be asked to request village and county authorities to see that the main highways are kept free from this menace and that the operators of wayside stands be asked to provide room for motorists who stop to purchase, to pull off the road. Jones also requested that all automobile drivers lend their assistance in this movement in the interest of themselves and other motorists.

NEW OVERLAND IS NOW ON DISPLAY; BALLOON TIRES

The Greene County Hardware Company, agent for Studebaker and Overland cars, is announcing that the New Blue Bird Overland will be on display this week.

This car with its longer body and improved with balloon tires has the same riding comfort found in more expensive machines, according to Mr. Sutton who has just returned from the factory. The new Overland is the best car he has seen yet at the price.

JOHN ACTON OF CEDARVILLE DIES

John Acton, 71, of Cedarville, died at his home Saturday morning at 1:30 o'clock. Death was caused by a complication of diseases, from which he had suffered for the past eight weeks.

Mr. Acton was an employee of the Hager Straw Board and Paper Company, Cedarville, for eighteen years, and for the past eleven years had served as watchman for the company.

He was born in 1853 near Chillicothe and came to Greene County twenty-two years ago. His wife was before marriage, Miss Mary Elizabeth Lockard and she survives with two sons, Robert Acton, of Yellow Springs, and Fred Acton, of Cedarville. Six grandchildren and one great grandchild, also survive.

Funeral services will be held at the residence on Xenia Avenue, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, standard time, with interment at Massies Creek Cemetery, Cedarville. The Hager Company plant will be closed Monday afternoon because of the funeral.

FOUR CYLINDER JOB OF BUICK MAKE IS PROVING POPULAR

"Once a prospective purchaser has carefully gone over a Buick four-cylinder car in its every detail, its superiority will be impressed on his mind," says J. B. Bice, of the Xenia Garage. A large number of distinctive features that contribute toward comfort and convenience are found in the Buick four-cylinder model. Viewed from any angle the four models in the Buick four-cylinder line for 1924 are beautiful and distinctive. The color of the body is pleasing and is heightened by the nickel front rims on the head and side lights.

The running board is placed low to the ground and is of proper width. The mechanical parts have been given the same careful attention as in the body. The valve-head motor is powerful and compact, it is the result of more than twenty years' experience in motor building. The Buick valve-in-head motor has more perfect combustion than any other type of motor, a quicker ignition and a smaller loss of heat through the water jacket. Cooling is effected by means of the water jackets in that entirely surround each valve and cylinders. Circulation is maintained by means of a new centrifugal pump driven by spiral gears.

THREE COUNTIES LEAD IN DRIVE

Ohio can now record three definite advances in the fight to rid the state of bovine tuberculosis. Three counties, Erie, Huron, and Medina, within the past two weeks have completed the county-wide test to detect tuberculosis in dairy cattle.

In Erie County, first to finish, 10,000 cattle were subjected to the tuberculin test, and 452 of them, or 4.5 percent, reacted unfavorably and were slaughtered. Only four herd owners positively refused to test, County Agent H. A. Stevens reports, and their herds have been quarantined.

Huron County herds averaged three-fourths of 1 per cent reactors, and so has a good chance of certification as a modified accredited area, according to the state veterinarian, Dr. F. A. Zimmer.

Medina County figures are not yet available.

The law specifies that any area which, on its first testing, averages not over 1 per cent of reactors and on a retest sixty days later averages not over one-half of 1 per cent reactors, may be certified as a modified accredited area. This holds good without further testing for three years, provided quarantine regulations are adhered to strictly.

Aside from the assurance of unfact milk both for humans and animals, a modified accredited area brings higher prices to producers of livestock and livestock products, experience in other states shows.

WHAT MR. DEPEW OVERLOOKED

As he looks backward from the vantage point reached by the attainment of four score years and ten, Chauncey M. Depew of New York, retaining a lively interest in all those affairs which have combined to make his career a busy and useful one, finds he has little to regret. Those who have read his memoirs, published a year or two ago, as well as those who have been familiar with the political history of the United States during the last fifty years, realize the not unimportant part which this man of affairs has played in helping to shape and direct those activities in which he has always showed a lively interest. This year, as formerly, Mr. Depew plans to take part in the national convention of the Republican Party. His voice has been heard at those quadrennial gatherings almost since the day of Lincoln.

It is not always that one, looking backward across the expanse of years, can say truthfully that he finds nothing to regret. Mr. Depew speaks quite convincingly, even when he insists that he does not seriously begrudge a lost opportunity to possess himself of a fortune which might have reached the tremendous sum of $150,000,000. "I am not sorry that I did not make all that money," he says. He relates that in 1886, by the investment of $10,000, he might have become owner of a one-sixth interest in the Bell telephone patents. He was advised, he relates, by the then President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, to have nothing to do with the telephone; that it was only a toy, and never would be of any practical use. "I have since figured," he says, "that this one-sixth interest would have now been worth $150,000,000."

It would be interesting to be told just what this man, whose memory runs backward almost a century, regards as the greatest or most significant lesson he has learned. He intimates, circumstantially, that he has been impressed most by the realization that there is no limit to the possibility of human endeavor. He has seen those things which convince him of this. Can a greater or more valuable lesson be learned?

THE BIBLE AND THE HOME

The only hope of our country is in the spread and personal acceptance of true religion, so that Jesus Christ may be the Saviour and Lord of our lives.

A few days ago four men were sentenced to die in the electric chair as convicted murderers. One of them was 21 years old, two of them 23, and one was 28. Two of these young men were brothers. The judge after sentencing them, said that twelve years experience on the bench has shown him that 80 per cent of criminals were less than 25 years of age. How can such things be in a country where conditions are so favorable as ours?

In no other country are children so well cared for. The homes in which they are brought up, even among the comparatively poor, have comforts and luxuries unknown to the children of many other lands. They are well clothed and well fed, while millions are spent on their schooling. Parents generally throughout the country withhold no good things within their reach, sometimes even at great personal sacrifice.

What is needed to correct conditions apparently so favorable, and yet so defective as to produce a criminal class, 80 per cent of which are hardly out of their teens? Various solutions have been proposed by those interested in improving our citizenship, none of which seems more hopeful of good results than Bible reading. When the Bible was more generally read in the homes in the early days of our country, the conditions we now deplore did not exist, even though the children had not so many other advantages.

"GREAT" AND "NOBLE"

I have sometimes noted with a great deal of interest how careless we are about most words in our language, and yet how careful we are about some others; for example, there is one word which we do not use carelessly and that is the word "noble." We use the word "great" indiscriminately. A man is great because he has had great material success and piled up a fortune; a man is great because he is a great writer, or a great orator; a man is great because he is a great hero. We notice in him some distinct quality that overtops like qualities in other men. But we reserve the word "noble" carefully for those whose greatness is not spent in their own interest. A man must have a margin of energy which he does not spend upon himself in order to win this title of nobility. He is noble in our popular conception only when he goes outside the narrow circle of self-interest and begins to spend himself for the interest of mankind. Then, however humble his gifts, however undistinguished his intellectual force, we give him this title of nobility, and admit him into the high peerage of man who will not be forgotten.—Woodrow Wilson, in "Robert E. Lee."

SUITS US IF IT DOES GEN. WOOD

The Fairfield Philippines Bill has been reported in the House, and there is some chance that it may be voted upon before adjournment. This measure goes almost the whole way in satisfying Filipino sentiment as reported in this country by the advocates of a larger measure of self-government and ultimate independence. American control in the islands would be made of the most slender nature, the burden of American responsibility remaining the same. Complete independence would be automatic at the end of twenty years, unless the Filipinos themselves in some way should indicate a desire to the contrary. The bill, in its altruism, takes virtually no account of any self-interest the United States may have in the Philippines. It is intended, at considerable sacrifice on our part, to banish Filipino unrest. It will not do this, of course, for the Filipino politicians cannot afford to give up their principal stock in trade. If it will not work as intended, there is certainly little reason for its passage.

THE EXCUSE

I told him that my child is sick,
And thought perhaps he hadn't heard;
He called me in to make a kick
Because some blunder had occurred.
"Did you do this?" he screamed at me.
I said I did, and told him why.
"That's no excuse at all!" said he.
"I said to sell, and you wrote buy."

It's funny how some men forget,
All that life teaches, day by day.

They suffer pain and grief and yet
The memory of it fades away.
"That's no excuse," was what he said,
And I had sat up all night long
Watching beside my Billy's bed,
And it's no wonder I did wrong.
Perhaps I did deserve his rage,
But still I did the best I could;
My mind was never on the page,
And that he should have understood
Of course the blunder I regret.
But does a man's mind turn so cold
That hours of anguish 'twill forget?
He had a sick child once, I'm told!

From time to time housekeeper-readers write to me concerning the renovation of their window shades. "Are they washable?" I am asked, "or could I paint them a darker color to cover the dirt?"

Shades, like anything else, can be renewed in proportion to their worth. In other words, an expensive quality shade can be cleaned repeatedly whereas a cheap shade may not stand even one thorough cleansing without showing a distinct change of appearance.

It pays to buy a shade of good linen rather than a cheap, starched, cotton one. A "Holland" shade means a linen shade which can be sponged off with soapy water and wiped dry. But the cheaper filled or starched shades will crack and, if sponged, must be handled most carefully.

To sponge a good Holland shade, apply a very thick soapuds (white soap) with a sponge, taking care that the sponge is wrung almost dry. Spread the shade on a table to do the work, and wipe with a clean, moistened cloth, then with a dry cloth, cleansing only a small area at a time.

The best way to clean the cheaper quality of shade is the following: Lay the shade on a table and rub lightly with a little cheese cloth bath filled with heated cornmeal. Finish by dusting with a soft-bristled brush. This method may also be used on the better quality of shade if desired.

Still other ways of renovating Holland shades are these: Rub shades lightly with powdered bath brick applied with a slightly-moistened pad of soft cloth. Dust with a soft brush. Or, begin by wiping the shade all over with a white-cheese-cloth duster, then go over it again with a sponge moistened with turpentine.

Shades that are too old to be washed can often be painted with a good quality of house paint. But take care to apply this paint in a thin layer and to dry it thoroughly before putting the shade up.

I must warn my readers that colored shades are more difficult to cleanse than white ones. Washing may streak or fade them. Sometimes the heated-corn-meal method is the only one safe to use—but you should experiment part of the shade, before going ahead even with this, on an inconspicuous with the entire shade. It is always safe to make tests, in work of this sort, before boldly attempting to cleanse the whole article.

MONEY AT WORK

Practical Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments

THE PRIDE OF OWNERSHIP

When you buy a good bond or a share of stock you purchase several by-products in addition to collecting interest and dividends.

1. You can borrow money on good bonds or stock if you have to. You may have an unexpected doctor and hospital bill, and in such cases ready money is usually a necessity. The ability to borrow easily on your securities, then, is worth something; a by-product.

2. When you become the owner of good, sound securities you find yourself taking more interest in business and industrial enterprises in general. In other words, your horizon is widened by virtue of your new business interests; a by-product.

3. You develop self-respect through ownership of good bonds or stocks. As a bondholder, the corporation is indebted to you, and you stand in the position of lender.

and through the purchase of a share of stock you actually become a part owner of the business, and such ownership develops self-confidence and self-respect; a by-product.

SOVIET TELESCOPE TO PRODUCE PHOTOS

London, May 17.—The observatory at Simla, Soviet Russia, will shortly possess one of the world's wonder telescopes.

It is now being finished and assembled at the works of Sir Howard Grubb, famous English telescope maker, and has taken seven years to make.

Contrary to most telescopes, this one has been constructed for taking photographs as well as for vision, so that the astronomer may see what he is photographing.

The telescope, which is estimated to be worth $75,000, contains a mirror forty inches wide, eight and a half inches thick and weighing nearly 1,000 pounds, which took more than a year of continual grinding and polishing to make. The mirror alone cost $5,000.

The principal eyepiece is not at the lower end of the barrel near the ground, but juts out at the mouth of the telescope. The observer is hauled up from the floor some thirty feet below in a steel chair to the eyepiece.

A clock controls the movements of the instrument, and is set so that the star under observation can be kept in sight as it moves across the heavens. The telescope thus moves in an arc inside the dome of the observatory. The arc also moves around as the telescope is operated.

TROUBLE

If we only knew it, trouble is really more an asset than a liability.

I have never known a strong character that wasn't well burdened with trouble.

Trouble actually becomes useful when it is handled right. And strange as it may seem, you can get as much out of solving your troubles as fun out of your problems that aren't all mixed up with trouble.

Trouble is a part of the business of life—just as much as honestly earning a living, or creating something useful.

When trouble comes to small people they are immediately frightened and try to run away from it. The big person faces trouble. Looks it in the face. An important fact arises here—trouble shrinks when you tell it to its face that you are not afraid of it, mu-y days.

Robert Updegraff says that the man who knows how to handle trouble is worth twice as much as the man who doesn't know. Why not? Isn't the man who is able to carry through a plan under fire worth more than the one who has no fire to go through? The easy jobs in life are all taken and there is a long waiting list. You have to hunt and hope and pray for the man who will tackle trouble.

No one ever gets very far by side-stepping trouble. For until you master it and make it useful, you are not worthy to enjoy the fruits of joy and happiness.

Trouble is a tribute to greatness, for there can be no greatness without it.

And never believe that you are given more than your share. It's a gift of fortune. Just like sunlight, or the perfume of flowers, or dark, mu-y days.

Opportunity's Footlights

The different little offers which make up the Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican's A-B-C Classified Section are just like the footlights of a stage upon which a piece called "Opportunity" is being presented.

These profitable offers make Opportunity stand out in clear-cut splendor.

If the lights were not there, you could not see Opportunity's every move, mood and action. You might get a vague impression that Opportunity was fumbling away somewhere in the gloom—but you wouldn't know where it was or what it was doing. You wouldn't even be sure that it was actually there.

But you don't need to be afraid that these lights will ever go out. There's a new supply coming along every day to replace those which are taken away. You may be sure that the Classified Ads will always keep Opportunity bathed in brilliance.

And you may be sure it will pay you to read the A-B-C Classified Ads in the light of the profits they present!

REMARKABLE RECOVERY OF MRS. SPINK

Gives Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Full Credit

Minn. June, Wis.—"I was under treatment, but nothing seemed to help me, and I was run-down and so weak that I had to remain in bed much of the time and was like an invalid. I had pains in my abdomen and in the female organs, and my stomach bothered me. My husband saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, thought it must be good, and brought it home to me and advised me to try it. After taking one bottle I was able to eat, and after six bottles I was doing my own work, which I hadn't been able to do for years. I have a new baby who is doing nicely, and I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and feeling better than I have for four years. The medicine is surely wonderful and a good thing to have in the house."—Mrs. GEORGE SPINK, Minnesota Junction, Wisconsin.

A country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound reports 98 per cent. benefited. For sale by druggists everywhere.

BRINGING UP FATHER

THE HALF-TIME WIFE By VIOLET DARE

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.

SUZANNE ATWOOD resents the fact that her husband, GEOFFREY ATWOOD, allows his secretary, MRS. LINDA VALE, to interfere between them. She herself has tried to thrust aside DUNCAN HALE, a former suitor, although he is sure that she still cares for him. Suzanne is very fond of Atwood's nephews, DICK and LAWRENCE LEIGH, and advises Dick in a boyish love affair with LOLITA, a chorus girl with whom he is infatuated.

XXIX—DUNCAN'S PROMISE

SUZANNE drew back into a corner of the elevator, wishing that she could hide behind Duncan Hale. After telling Mrs. Vale that she had not come to see Duncan, it was a most disturbing to have this occur. She was too much taken up with her own confusion to realize that Mrs. Vale was quite as embarrassed as herself, and that Lolita had drawn back into a corner herself and turned away, after the most frigid of greetings.

"That's funny," commented Hale a few moments later, when he and Suzanne were alone. "That Mrs. Vale spoke to me about the little chorus girl who was with her tonight—wanted to know if I knew her, and said that it seemed to her that young Dick Leigh seemed to have taken a fancy to her."

"Yes? I didn't know that they knew each other," answered Suzanne.

"Neither did I. That night I met Mrs. Vale at your house the girl was there—remember? But I don't believe they met, for the girl left in a great hurry."

"Oh, so she did," exclaimed Suzanne, becoming interested. "I recall the whole thing now. Lolita had been at the house only a little while when she rushed out into the hall, and Dick went to find her, and came back to tell me that she wanted to go home. Lolita didn't tell me why she wanted to go; just said good-night very sweetly, and Dick took her home. How queer that she should be with Mrs. Vale this evening, here?"

"Yes. I tell you, Suzanne, that Vale woman is a queer one. If I were you I'd drop a word to that husband of yours."

Suzanne's laughter was almost hysterical.

"Oh Duncan, if only you knew how many words I've dropped," she exclaimed. "I didn't want to talk to you about Geoff, ever, but now I've got to. He and I have quarrelled; I wanted him to explain some things about his conduct, and he wouldn't, and then turn-^d on me about you. She happened to know that you had sent me some flowers, and that I had written to you. She must have told him. Now he's sure that I came more for you than for him—" "You do!" he declared. "You've always loved me. I've told you that before, but you wouldn't admit that I was right. Now, you see—" "Oh Duncan, don't be a fool!" Suzanne quite forgot her own doubts of a short time before; she realized anew that her affection for Duncan was dead. "You're just making matters much harder for me by insisting on that. I want you to go to Geoff and tell him that you and I have been nothing more than friends since my marriage to him; I want you to convince him of that. It will be hard, but surely

"The Vale woman is a queer one!"

"You can do it for me." "You know that I'd do anything that would make you happy," he answered slowly.

"Then do this one thing. I'm not going back to Geoff, but I want him to know the truth. Go to our house now—you'll find him there, I'm sure. If he isn't there, wait for him. Tell him that I've told you over and over that I didn't care for you, that I wanted you to go away. Make him realize it. Do that for me, please."

"All right," he answered, rather sulkily. "Then I'll leave you here," she went on, pausing as they reached a street corner. "I'm staying at the Wickham. You go to our house and talk with him, and then phone me. I'll be in all evening."

She walked on toward her hotel slowly. She hardly dared to think of how that interview between Geoff and Duncan Hale would turn out. Surely Geoffrey would believe Duncan. Then if only Geoff would be reasonable about Mrs. Vale—

It did not occur to her that possibly she was being unreasonable also. She could think only that Mrs. Vale was a scheming woman who sought to make trouble between her and her husband. And certainly Geoff ought to get rid of the woman, or at least put her in her place!

"He'll just have to see that," Suzanne exclaimed, as she walked across the lobby at the Wickham, her key in her hand.

If she had troubled to glance about her, she would have seen Geoffrey Atwood, in a far corner, watching her quietly.
